

THE OKANAGAN SATURDAY, APRIL 7, 2007

Human resources group helps business students

MacNaull

Recognizing that the Okanagan's labour shortage means human resources professionals are even more important, the province's HR association is tapping into Okanagan College business students.

The B.C. Human Resources Management Association will pay for a trip to Vancouver for college student Crystal Tillotson to attend an HR conference in May.

In addition, student Jennifer Hiebert received a $500 scholarship from the association.

The trip and scholarship were presented at the recent Okanagan Business Students Association Banquet at Kelowna's Grand hotel.

The annual banquet is organized by Okanagan College business students as a networking evening for grads and potential employers.

The Valley's labour crunch means human resources specialists are important in attracting and retaining good workers.

Photo contributed

B.C. Human Resources Management Association director Simon Cumming and the association's Southern Interior chair, Roberta Fidalgo, right, present Okanagan College business student Crystal Tillotson with a trip to an HR conference in Vancouver in May.